Community effort toward a clean sweep

Debra McQuinn and her family were among close to 40 volunteers who came out for Wednesday's community clean-up blitz, gathering bag after bag of debris from across Elk Point. The hard-working volunteers were later treated to a barbecue at the Elk Point Municipal Library in appreciation of their efforts.

Council sets mill rate

By VICKI BROOKER

Review Staff

Lighting on 50th Ave. and 54th Street was back on Elk Point Town Council's agenda last week, with discussion of ATCO's estimates of $20,913 for 54th Street using conventional street lighting and in the neighbourhood of $28,000 if underground wiring was used. ATCO estimated the cost of the 50th Ave portion at $40,000, but with the electrical company contributing $13,860 to the project for a net cost of $26,140 coming from the trail improvement grant.

The town's engineer had recommended that a planned walking trail be located on the south side of 50th Ave., but there is no power line on that side. It was noted that solar lighting would be a viable alternative for that area, without the need to install either overhead or underground lines.

Mayor Parrish Tung said the town would "probably use ATCO for the infill on Circle and Ravine Drive," as the line is already in place and other lights in that area are the conventional streetlights.

Commenting further on the walking trail, Tung said, "I want it to be 365-day accessible, and so the elements don't affect it. There are a lot of points to consider."

The walking trail lighting, along with potential purchases of industrial land, a future sewage treatment lagoon upgrade and where and how to install power in the river campsite were all part of the discussion leading up to approval of the town's 2011 capital budget.

Once the capital budget was approved, council was able to move on to setting the 2011 mill rate.

Jenny Blacklock was on hand to explain the mill rate calculations, and noted that assessment has dropped $154,000 in the past year, but on the other hand, there is no MD of St. Paul Foundation levy to be paid. Operating costs continue to rise, and "To get down to last year's mill rate, we had to drop the amount that would go into capital reserves," she commented.

Community Choir 'comes of age' at concert

By VICKI BROOKER

Review Staff

Elk Point and District Community Choir "is now of legal age anywhere," Don Conrad declared Friday night, as he offered the Spring Concert crowd a "flashback" to their first concert, holding up one of the tie-dyed t-shirts the choir wore that long-ago evening.

"Carol Hellquist and Sharon Kuhn worked hard to make 32 of these for us, and we thought we looked good. Mine still fits me," he quipped. Thirteen of the choir's charter members were part of Friday's lineup, he added.

"We come from various communities, and we as a choir, are a community, and a family."

The choir started their program with an a cappella version of 'Just Let Me Sing,' with Barb Buryn taking over the piano bench to accompany an upbeat version of the traditional spiritual, 'Swing Low,' Deanna Easthope accompanied Ian Tyson's classic 1960 folksong, 'Four Strong Winds,' and the wordless 'Spinning Song,' and 'That Judgment Morning,' featuring soloist Shirley Osinchuk, Dixie Coleman with shakers and Kelsey Taylor with drums pounding out the rhythm.

Udo Mueller directs Elk Point Community Choir as they begin their 21st annual Spring Concert, with Deanna Easthope at the piano and Elizabeth Orr as page turner.

Community Choir

The men of the choir, with Sheila Hatch at the piano, performed the classic 'Goodnight Sweetheart' to end the set.

Rocky Wallbaum added a personal note to Stan Rogers' 'Forty-five Years From Now,' adding a salute to the choir in his solo, accompanied by Udo Mueller, who also accompanied Dave Pilisko's rendition of Gordon Lightfoot's 'And the Old Man Came In From the Forest,' with Robin Sieben on flute, Erica Spoeth on cello and Alan Kostyniuk on guitar.

Kerry Anderson added piano accompaniment to her duet with Shirley Osinchuk of 'Be Still and Know,' while Mueller accompanied his duet with Dixie Coleman, 'When I Fall in Love.'

Linda Peters took over as director and Easthope returned to the piano as the ladies of the choir sang 'Turn Around.'

Mueller was back at the podium for the final set, as the choir sang 'And So It Goes,' with soloist Rocky Wallbaum, 'The Longest Time,' with soloist Kelsey Taylor, 'Java Jive,' with soloist Mickayla Chamberland and Barb Bury at the piano, and 'Homeward Bound' with soloist Lawrence Pidluzny.

Mueller thanked the audience for their support of the choir's efforts, and called the choir "A collaborative venture," possible only because of the efforts of members who come from "an area the size of Nova Scotia."

Their final number of the evening was a traditional spiritual, 'Keep Your Lamps Trimmed and Burning,' with Kelsey Taylor and Dixie Coleman again pounding out the rhythm on drums and shakers.

Alcohol a factor in rollovers

By Cst. TROY FEERO
Elk Point RCMP Detachment

At 9 p.m. on April 22, police along with emergency services were called to a single vehicle rollover that occurred along the North Saskatchewan River 4 km south of Elk Point. The male driver was trapped inside the vehicle and it took one and a half hours for the Elk Point fire department to extricate the driver. After the extrication, the injured driver was transported to the Elk Point Health Care Centre. Due to the serious nature of his injuries, STARS air ambulance was dispatched and flew the driver to Edmonton for further medical attention. Police are still investigating the collision, believing alcohol was a factor in the crash.

At 6 a.m. on April 23, Elk Point RCMP was dispatched to a single vehicle rollover. The driver, who received minor injuries, was transported to the Elk Point Health Care Centre by ambulance. Alcohol was a factor and the driver has been charged with impaired driving-related offenses.

EDITORIAL

A good start

This past week has seen two major clean-up days in the area, first the provincial highway clean-up day with the 4-Hers, Ukrainian Dance Club and possibly other local groups doing their best to improve the landscape. On Wednesday, students at both Elk Point Elementary and F. G. Miller were cleaning their school grounds and even further afield, and later that day was the town's volunteer clean-up. Everyone worked hard, and collected a huge amount of winter debris.

But... there's more out there. There weren't enough groups to do all the highways, or enough individuals to clean the whole town. Then there were all these days of wind, which scattered trash even further, some going onto areas that had already been cleaned.

So, it's back to square one. If we each take a bag or two, and clean up our own space, that would go a long way to getting the job done. Let's make a clean sweep!

WAY BACK WHEN...

Waving goodbye, welcome oilpatch

HERE'S THE NEWS THAT MADE THE HEADLINES OF THE LAKELAND REVIEW AND ELK POINT REVIEW FOR THE WEEK OF MAY 17 IN...

1986

An old-fashioned May blizzard closed Heinsburg School for a full day and sent Elk Point students home at noon after a storm warning was issued. Mrs. Conrad's Grade 2 class released helium-filled balloons with notes attached, asking the finder to contact the school so the class could find out how far the balloons traveled, as part of their study of transportation.

1991

Time lifted a hand to wave goodbye to the 44 members of F. G. Miller's Class of 1991, with valedictorian Kim Bugera urging her classmates to "stand up for what you believe in, and don't compromise." Mayor Bruce Kleeberger threw the switch to set the new water treatment plant in operation, and said he was pleased that an economical solution had been found to Elk Point's water woes.

1996

New businesses were opening on Main Street, with Kelly's Closet, Florence's Country Crafts and a radio-controlled aircraft store all set to open, while renovations were just complete at Footprints Subs and Arcade. The Review welcomed the world to our oil patch with a salute to the petroleum industry, the major companies operating here at the time and a sampling of the support crew of service and supply businesses.

2001

Elk Point Elks and OORP honoured charter members Elmer Bjornstad, Mary Bochon, Mary Kryvenchuk and Niki Riemer at their joint celebration for the 40th anniversary of the lodges. Elk Point explored new tourism opportunities with REACH Corporation, with enthusiasm making up for a lack of participants as participants went through a SWOT analysis to determine the future of tourism in the area.

2006

Elk Point's tax rates held steady at 2005 levels, with a decline in Alberta School Foundation requisition and small cutbacks to the municipal operations levy offsetting a 0.723 mill increase in the general contingency capital reserve. A media tour of organic food producers and visited Fort George and Buckingham House, which supplied pemmican made from saskatoons and bison meat to fuel the hard-working fur brigade over 200 years ago, and later visited Walter and Cecelia deSilva's organic fruit and free-range chicken farm near Stoney Lake and En Santé Winery at Lac Santé.

GUEST COLUMN

Youth and work

Now that we are in the middle of May and the end of June is around the corner, some of our young people will be interviewing with potential employers to find a summer job. What are our young people expecting from their employer when they apply for a potential job? As the parent and grandparent generation of these young people, we are experiencing some concern with what we seem to be hearing from the young people. Are our young people really employable? Do they understand the work ethic?

Times have changed. It was our grandparents who went through two world wars. They understood the necessity of working hard. They recognized that if they did not, they would not survive. After World War II, nearly every western country experienced great prosperity. Our grandparents, in general, slowly began to ease up on their children and gave them more while requiring less, unintentionally instilling in them a lack of appreciation for hard work.

This trend grew worse with the next generation – the "baby boomers". They never knew war and never saw the necessity to work hard. Because they had been given much, they in turn wanted their children to "have it all". The mindset developed, "I don't want my kids to suffer".

Don't misunderstand. While it is good and right to want the best for children, most parents, perhaps unwittingly, rear their children from the perspective that they should be given everything for nothing. This has created a generation of youth that has largely not been taught the wonderful benefits of hard work.

The French Leftist philosopher André Gorz wrote: "The work ethic has become obsolete. It is no longer true that producing more means working more, or that producing more will lead to a better way of life. ... Neither is it true any longer that the more each individual works, the better off everyone will be. In a post-industrial society, not everyone has to work hard in order to survive, though may be forced to anyway due to the economic system. The present crisis has stimulated technological change of an unprecedented scale and speed: 'the micro-chip revolution'. The object and indeed the effect of this revolution has been to make rapidly increasing savings in labour, in the industrial, administrative and service sectors. Increasing production is secured in these sectors by decreasing amounts of labour. As a result, the social process of production no longer needs everyone to work in it on a full-time basis. The work ethic ceases to be viable in such a situation and work-based society is thrown into crisis."

Students today are lacking in areas known as work ethics. Research also indicates that affective skills are just as important as psychomotor and cognitive. Current literature offers many suggestions for the teaching of work ethic attributes. However, more research must be conducted. Anyway, it can be said that certain types of work, values and attitudes should be taught. The most frequently taught values and attitudes are punctuality, dependability, reliability, responsibility, dedication, honesty, conscientiousness, ambition, cooperativeness, helpfulness, adaptability, and resourcefulness.

An excellent model for teaching work place ethics is the model by Berryman (1991). Berryman proposes seven strategies.

Modeling – the performance of an activity by an expert so that students can learn from the expert how that task can/should be done.

Coaching – a teacher observes a student performing a task and provides helpful feedback in the form of support, modeling, reminders, and suggestions.

Scaffolding – support for the students so that they can carry out the tasks.

Fading – gradual removal of support so students come to perform their tasks on their own.

Articulation – means for providing students the opportunity to articulate their reasoning and their problem solving strategies.

Reflection – any technique that allows students to compare their own problem solving process with that of an expert.

Exploration – any device that pushes the students into a mode of problem solving on their own.

Recreation areas draw input at LARP session

By VICKI BROOKER
Review Staff

The next step in the creation of the Lower Athabasca Integrated Regional Plan comes to an end this week, with the final two information sessions unveiling the draft plan in Calgary and Edmonton. The final session in northeast Alberta was held Thursday in Elk Point, following sessions earlier in the week in Cold Lake and Glendon.

Local feedback on land use issues was gathered in Elk Point and many other communities last September, and was incorporated into the draft.

Trisha Anderson, a public affairs officer with Alberta Sustainable Resource Development emphasized, "it is important to realize that it is a draft," and that further changes may well be made following the input gathered at the current series of sessions.

Seven objectives for regional outcomes have been identified: the optimization of the economic potential of the oil sands, the diversification of the region's economy, management of the landscape to maintain ecosystem function and biodiversity, management of air and water to support human and ecosystem needs, enhancement of the quality of life for residents through increased opportunities for recreation and active living, and the inclusion of aboriginal people in land-use planning.

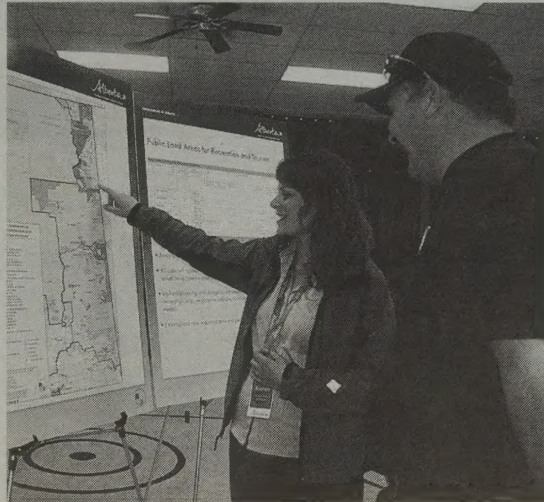

A series of proposed regulations have been developed which would implement and support the regional plan. Anderson says the regulations set out "what is and is not permitted. We can now explain how it's going to be done."

Ten new recreation areas and six public land areas for recreation and tourism are included in the plan. An area encompassing much of the southern area of the region, from the southern border of the MD of Bonnyville to north of Lac la Biche and Heart Lake would be known as Lakeland Country, the province's next iconic tourism destination. The draft states that the Lakeland Country area "has the province's highest density of quality recreational lakes and many attractive tourism features, but its tourism potential is currently under-realized." The government would work closely with municipalities, the private sector, aboriginal people, interested private landowners and other stakeholders to enhance the region with attractions, amenities and activities. The plan emphasizes that private landowners would continue to make decisions about the use and management of their land, without changes to private property rights.

This section of the display drew the most interest from visitors to the Elk Point session, with Karen Wirtanen and Rebecca Reeves from Alberta Tourism and Recreation kept busy answering questions and jotting down comments on the proposals.

Three wildland provincial parks, the furthest south located south and east of Fort McMurray and the other two between Wood Buffalo National Park and the Saskatchewan border, and two public land use zone conservation area are also planned, and when added to those already in place, would equal more than two million hectares of protected land in northeast Alberta, more than three times the size of Banff National Park.

The plan says the conservation areas will be "managed to minimize and prevent land disturbance" with "some types of industrial tenure, such as oil sands, minerals and commercial forestry... not considered compatible." Existing petroleum, natural gas and recreational leases will be honoured, and conservation areas "will be managed to provide low-impact backcountry opportunities and other tourism products. Hunting, fishing and trapping will continue... motorized recreation will continue on designated trails that exist when the regional plan is approved and random recreation will not be permitted."

Air and water quality, ecosystems and environment were also up for discussion at the meeting.

Six straight wins for Sox

First of all I want to thank everyone who voted for me a few months ago in the Lakeland's Amazing Person contest. Donna and I just returned from our weekend trip for two to Vancouver, the hotel was very posh; the food was great, we did a lot of sight seeing. Even though we had some rainy days, it was a great time, so thanks again to all my friends. I love you all!

Even though the manager was away, the Sox did play. Six straight wins for the Sox, in the month of May. The Sox traveled to Sherwood Park this past weekend, defeating Confederation Park and Sherwood Park on Saturday, then Athabasca on Sunday. Matthew "MC Hammer" Church was on the mound in the first game, followed

doug BASSETT
Review Sports

by Kyle Corbeil and Brett Mitchelmore. Lucas Church and Tanner Corbeil taking the hill in the second game, Jordan Gould and Jordan Stacy pitching the third game.

Dylan Berg with a triple in the first game against Confederation, Cody Preston with a RBI double. Dylan Berg with two doubles in the second game against Sherwood Park, Tanner Corbeil with a double and a single, Cody Preston with a triple. Jordan Nault and Dustin Berg going four for four in the Sunday game against Athabasca.

The competition will no doubt become a little tougher next month when the Sox, with their winning record will be re-tiered into a higher division.

The Pee wee Girls traveled to Pierceland on this past Wednesday and showed some excellent teamwork and cheering, losing a very close game 15 to 12. Two new girls putting on the catching gear and doing a super job, Katelyn Hunter and Taylor Castle suiting up behind the mask. Kasandra Moores and Sydney Dustow with some big hits in this one,

And now for the K.A.Campbell quote of the week: "I can never understand why anyone leaves the game early to beat the traffic. The purpose of baseball is to keep you from caring if you beat the traffic." Last week's answer to: "How can you think and hit at the same time?" - Yogi Berra. Verna Lazicki will continue as secretary, Lois Yaremkevich as treasurer, Lois Sharek as historian, Madeline Stepa as chaplain and Leona Moneta as conductress. The lodge's newest member, Theresa McNamara, was installed as guard and Marilyn Bosvik will be the lodge's pianist.

Past District Deputy Lois Sharek served as Installing Officer for the ceremonies at the lodge's May 9 meeting, with Lenore Bjornstad as her assistant.

Fire ban issued

Due to strong winds and dry conditions, a complete fire ban was issued by the County of St. Paul No. 19 just before press time, effective immediately.

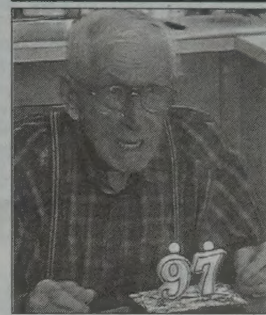

It includes all burning barrels, recreational fire pits, fireworks and charcoal barbecues. Gas-fired appliances are still permitted. Existing fire permits have been suspended and no new permits will be issued.

Mill rate

With an operating surplus of $109,000 in 2010, she noted, "we haven't budgeted for a surplus for 10 or 15 years. This is the first year we've had a surplus like this."

"I've never been a believer in reducing taxes when we need the money. If we have to increase taxes, that's what we have to do," said Coun. Ron Fraess.

Coun. Dwayne Yaremkevich said he "would like to see the capital reserve at $250,000" and would "settle for a half mill increase, that's definitely livable."

"No increase over one half mill," declared Coun. Eugene Buck, with Coun. Bernice Capjack adding that she would "rather have a half mill increase this year, than a big increase next year."

Council approved a motion to increase the capital reserve levy by one-half mill across the board, and then went on to give the mill rate reading all three readings.

The tax rate for residential, farmland, condominiums and fourplexes was set at 9.966 mills, non-residential with improvements and linear property at 22.500 mills, non-residential vacant at 24.794 and machinery and equipment at 19.543 mills.

Although the mill rate climbed this year, all but the machinery and equipment rates are still below the 2009 figures, which were 10.496 for residential, farmland, condominiums and fourplexes, 23.000 for non-residential with improvements and linear property and 25.294 for non-residential vacant.

The machinery and equipment tax dropped each year from 2005 to 2010, when it jumped to 19.043, and is still below the 2005 figure of 19.920 mills.

Ball diamond storage

The need for a storage facility for secure and mouse-proof minor ball equipment at the Elk Point Recreation Park was brought before council. A request to locate a sea can storage unit in the bush behind the batting cage to fill this need was given council's approval.

Handicapped parking

A suggestion that a space in the downtown core be designated as handicapped parking was discussed at some length, with the final decision made to locate one such space on the north side of the TD Bank. With sloped curbs at the nearby intersection, this was felt to fill the needs of those wishing to access banks, the drug store and other businesses. Council agreed to designate the space on a trial basis.
